

'RACE TO LE MANS'

A 6X60 STREAMING DOCUMENTARY

The last time Charles Putt competed as a professional racing car driver was in 2000 at the Sebring race track in Florida, in F3000 (and he hasn't driven on public roads for 12 years).

Motivated by his hyper-competitive nature and by recent world events, he now wants to get back behind the wheel, pronto.

At the Daytona 24 hours. And Le Mans 24 hours.

Time is not on his side. In fact it's a race against the clock.

His.

Can a 'mature man' go toe to toe with drivers half his age?

'Race to Le Mans' documents this nutter's journey back into the driving seat. And what happens when he gets there.

In February 2022, Charles intends to compete in The Daytona 24 hour race at Daytona International Speedway in Daytona Beach. In June, he will contest the legendary Le Mans 24 hour. That means he doesn't have long to prepare for these gruelling challenges. That means exhaustive (and exhausting) training against the clock. But not just behind the wheel.

Will his 'mature' body cope? How about his 'mature' mind? High performance motor racing makes extraordinary demands of drivers. Endurance racing even more so. It requires faster than lightning reactions, phenomenal endurance, and huge mental strength. These things usually wane as we get older.

Usually.

For some, the will to win, the desire to overcome all others and all odds ... these things don't go away. For some, these things endure. For a few, the fury is even faster in later years.

We go with Charles as he confronts the medical, physical, and psychological realities of the challenge he has set himself. Initial medicals, interviews, test drives ... our hero has decades of catching up to do if he's going to overtake anyone at two of the world's toughest endurance motor races.

We will follow him to Le Mans itself, and detail what happens – whether it's a triumph against the odds or ... not. Warts and all, skid marks galore, 'Race to Le Mans' is one man's odyssey to compete with some of the world's best drivers at a time of life when others are starting to take it easy. To hell with easy. This is a seat-of-the-pants story about defiance, courage, recklessness, and sticking it to the man at Le Mans. Better buckle up then.
